

AMBI Graduate Places 3rd Place In The American College Of Legal Medicine's 2010 Hoffman Bioethics Writing Competition

David Lemberg, MS, a graduate of the Alden March Bioethics Institute entered and placed in the top three in the American College of Legal Medicine's 2010 Hoffman Bioethics Writing Competition. His paper "On the Moral Significance of the Distinction Between Spare and Created Embryos" placed third. The winner's page can be found at <http://www.aclm.org/resources/swc/>

David Lemberg, MS, is the Co-Founder and Executive Producer of Science and Society, a show featuring Nobel Laureates, innovative and visionary researchers and scientists, and groundbreaking and trendsetting industry executives. Since 2003, David has interviewed more than 600 world leaders in the fields of cancer research, genetics and genomics, infectious diseases, environmental conservation and renewable resources, nanotechnology, particle physics, cosmology, and science education.

David has been interviewed by Fortune, The Scientist, IEEE Spectrum, and the Society for Biomolecular Sciences. His frequent television appearances include interviews on Sunday ABC Eyewitness News, CBS Evening News with Dan Rather, Good Day, New York, and other prominent network news programs.

David is a sought-after keynote speaker and conference MC/Moderator. His current keynote, "Science Fiction Becoming Science Fact", was presented most recently at The Molecular Convergence Conference. In recent years he has been the MC/Moderator at The Health of Nations Conferences and the BioLife Science Symposium. David has been writing in the health sciences field for 25 years and is widely published in print and online.