Pre-Exposure Prophylaxis (PrEP) reduces the risk of getting HIV.
PrEP, or Pre-Exposure Prophylaxis, is a pill taken every day that can help prevent getting HIV. When someone is exposed to HIV through sex or injection drug use, PrEP can help stop the virus.

PrEP is a powerful prevention tool shown to greatly reduce the risk of HIV infection.

PrEP must be taken once a day.

- You may be at risk of getting HIV.
- Your partner has HIV.
- You have unprotected sex and don’t know your partner’s HIV status.
- You are having unprotected sex with multiple partners.
- You are using injection drugs not prescribed to you.
